

2024 State Arts Agency Grant Making Facts

Individual Artists

Support for Individual Artists

Artists form the foundation of a state's creative environment. They act as creators and individual entrepreneurs who provide many of the products and designs that drive innovation and shape a state's cultural character. Many artists also work as educators, providing training in creative skills and passing on cultural traditions from one generation to the next. State arts agencies (SAAs) support artists through a variety of grants and services. Awards to artists are supported through a mixture of federal funds, state funds and private dollars.

Grant Funding for Individual Artists

State arts agencies invested over $21 million in grants to individual artists. This figure represents an increase of 204% from 2011, keeping pace with the growth of overall state arts agency grant making. Grants to individual artists as a proportion of all SAA grant portfolios average 19% of all grants and 4.8% of all grant dollars. These numbers should be interpreted as a minimum of SAA investments in individual artists, since they do not include SAA grants to intermediaries that state arts agencies engage to subgrant funds to artists. Also excluded from these figures are the numerous artists engaged by state and regional grants to organizations, a figure that totals more than 2 million annually.

Fellowship grants encourage the development of new creative works and advance artist careers. They are a common type of grant support and make up close to a third of SAAs' individual artist grants in terms of dollar amounts. Fellowship grants typically include public engagement requirements.

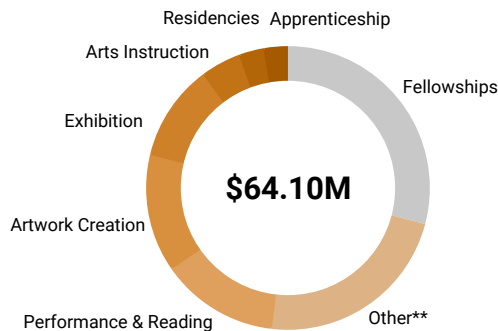

SAAs also provide grants for commissions, as well as project support for performances, exhibits, apprenticeships, professional development, instruction and residencies.

Programs and services: Beyond grant making, state arts agencies provide services and information to assist artists. One important SAA goal is to broaden opportunities for artists to showcase their work. To this end, numerous SAAs maintain artist rosters, which promote performing artists and encourage their booking for residencies and touring. Many SAAs offer galleries (both physical and virtual) and statewide art collections that encourage the display of art in public spaces. Some SAAs also offer digital marketplaces, online platforms that facilitate marketing and product sales. SAAs further provide training and networking services through conferences, workshops and web seminars that assist artists with business development and connect them with peers.
